

ABSTRACT

The present invention provides a medical stent delivery device for delivering a stent to a treatment site. The device has an elongated catheter with an inflatable balloon attached to its distal end for receiving a stent which is expandable radially upon inflation of the balloon. The elongated catheter includes a transitional area of material proximal and/or distal to the stent.

10050651.01.1402